Enlisted leadership takes on failure

Summer time in Texas usually means several days when temperatures soar above 100 degrees. Along with this hike in temperature, mandatory water restrictions are typically put into place. By the middle of summer, many yards are turned into crunchy, brown wastelands because temperatures are just too high for anything to survive. The important ingredients of water and temperature needed for grass to thrive are much like what success and failure are to personal growth. At some point in life, most people will experience either success or failure and if handled correctly, growth may occur. Click here for more

Social media requires care, caution with political material

Most Americans are born with a political rattle in their hands, and learn to shake it early. While U.S. culture promotes opinions and debate, the DoD, USAF and ARPC wish to remind Airmen that, while on duty participating in politics on social media is exactly the same as it is in-person: strictly prohibited.
