Preventing sexual assault in the Air Force is our enduring responsibility

As we begin Sexual Assault Awareness and Prevention Month, clear signs point to the progress we have made in combating sexual assault. We can cite encouraging numbers in the areas of prevalence, reporting and convictions; however, this serves as only the beginning of an enduring effort. This effort must continue without pause and we must not lose sight of it for a moment. Read more

301st develops exercise to train combat-ready Airmen

Just fifteen minutes into the 12-hour exercise here March 6-7, men and women with the 301st Medical Squadron at Naval Air Station Fort Worth Joint Reserve Base, Texas, stabilized an Airman's simulated broken ankle in field conditions while an inspector graded their treatment and patient care.
