Life as a military mommy

As I watch my little girl play in my green combat boots, a smile spreads across my face. I never imagined I would be an Airman and a mommy. When I enlisted in 2010, being a mom was not on my radar. My husband, Trey, and I had been married for eight months. It was nothing short of crazy that I wanted to join the military as a newlywed. However, I was looking for a way to expand my career experience and serving my country seemed like a great way to do that. Click here for more

Commander's Commentary: What is a Key Spouse?

What is a Key Spouse? That's the number one question I hear about the Key Spouse program. There is an entire handbook dedicated to defining the expectations and duties of a Key Spouse. But, I think I can explain it in a much simpler way. Read more

The recertification deadline for 301st Fighter Wing Airmen who receive the basic allowance for housing with dependent rate is closing fast. Air Force Reserve Command's deadline is Nov. 20, which just leaves the upcoming unit training assembly (UTA) as the last chance for you to get this done. Read more

Golden bolt enhances vigilance, safety

Safety in the military is a culture that nurtures and grooms Airmen to become more aware of their surroundings. Training Airmen to actively seek, find and prevent safety hazards helps foster a safer work environment. One area rich in various possible hazards is the flight line. Read more
